Frederick Delius was able to command an orchestra like no other. He uses the woodwinds and strings to amazing effect, and always manages to give his music a deliciously deep and rich bass sound. It reminds me of a combination of the music of Richard Wagner and Claude Debussy. In fact Frederick Delius had an interesting mix of musical influences. First of all of course is the African-American spiritual music, with its cheerful melodies and spirit.

Frederick Delius- Bio, Albums, Pictures - Classical Music

Delius clearly intended this piece to be his magnum opus, and parts of it are mightily impressive indeed, especially the sunrise ending (with pealing bells and gongs). At other times, however, it may seem that the music spends a bit too much time marveling at the coming of the "superman" and not enough time getting on with it.
